song of youth

I see youth
in the eager uncertainty of a freshman assuming the swagger and look of ease in the new surrounding of high school, where the rich promise of four years begins to unfold.

I see youth
in a history class, listening with rapt expression to the potent, awakening truth that illuminates a dimming past.

I see youth
grasping the mechanics of a foreign language, and hearing in the strange, rhythmic sound of the words,
the pulse of a distant country and a distant people.

I see youth
in the science lab,
seeking with cautious fervor,
the answer to the wondrous mystery of life itself.

I see youth
on a football field, running with impassioned speed toward touchdown glory amid the tremulous roar of the crowd and a sudden, animated burst of "Orange and Brown."

I see youth
on the night of the hop
when the gym is no longer a gym, but a magic place
filled with soft, whirling colors, and the floating sounds of music and laughter.

I see youth
on Torch day,
singing with tremulous voices
the moving words that leave so much unsaid.

I see youth
in cap and gown
on graduation night, reach out to greet the future.

prologue

In our times, youth has been portrayed in many ways: impulsive, reckless, and gallant. Of these, it is the last which stirs us most; for the eternal gallantry of youth brings to our minds the era of Knighthood with its unequalled pageantry, its unfaltering courage, and its steadfast bonds of friendship. Because we are young, because we have felt the joy of our youth surge within us, we like to think that in many ways we are akin to the bold and gallant knights who graced so colorful an era, and whose ideals and romanticism have inspired these pages.

Life in those spirited times was, as it is now, a constant challenge. For the knight in armor, it was the challenge to prove his chivalry, his heroism—even his sincerity in friendship. For us, in the pavilions of learning, these four years have proved as much of a challenge. Here we have tasted the fruit of knowledge, the sweet, soaring rewards of triumph and sometimes the poignance of defeat, the warmth of genuine and loyal friends, and finally, the reluctant glory of graduation.

And now we are ready to meet an even greater challenge—the world that beckons us. Our armor is our youth, our hopes, our dreams, and our shining faith in the future.

principal's message

TO THE CLASS OF JANUARY '55

When we read of Medieval Chivalry, a flood of dazzling and romantic pictures flashes across our minds—the Lancelots, the Quentin Durwards, the Crusaders, the Rolands, clad in shining armor astride prancing horses, jousts, tournaments, the fair Guineveres, the Elaines, the Rowenas, and the Rebeccas, dressed in scarlet, blue and gold, cheering them on to victory.

But behind all this pageantry and glitter were the millions who toiled and suffered to make this brave show possible—the peasants who toiled in the fields to raise the food and raw materials, the serfs who built the roads, the artisans who constructed the thickwalled castles and beautiful cathedrals, the armorers who fashioned the shining armor.

Among these workers were men of great skill and pride of craft. Their castles and cathedrals still stand today. Their magnificent stained glass windows still glow with breathtaking brilliant color. Their beautifully fashioned and decorated armor can be seen in our museums. Their magnificent tapestries decorate the walls of our art galleries.

This pride in craftsmanship, this painstaking care of detail, this willingness to spend years in acquiring the mastery of a trade, this joy in one's daily work—all seem to belong to that dim medieval past.

Can we somehow retain our assembly-line productive capacity and at the same time regain the joy and satisfaction in individual creativity and craftsmanship?

thank you

A mere "thank you" hardly seems adequate for the understanding, guidance, and inspiration you have offered to us.

You have truly been our guiding light during these three years of apprehensions and conflicts, decisions and doubts. Now that we have reached our goal of graduation, we wish you all the happiness and fulfillment you have desired for us during our high school years.

miniver cheevy

(With apologies to Edward Arlington Robinson)

Miniver Cheevy of Weequahic high, Bemoaned and cursed his plight,
All term long to seniors he'd cry—
"How I wish I were a knight!"

Miniver loved the knights of olde
Though he had never seen one,
He thought that fate had been unkind
For he could never be one.

Miniver sighed for the days of Arthur,
Of gallant knights and damsels fair,
He dreamed of Galahad on a white charger,
But to final exams he gave no care.

Miniver dreaded college boards,
And eyed a khaki suit with loathing,
He longed for the grace of flashing swords,
And shields and iron clothing.

Miniver knew that he ought
To think about graduation,
And so he began to give it thought
And soon—deep meditation.

And finally, decided he
To forsake his medieval dream,
For though a Lancelot he'd never be,
Knighthood could be the Legend's theme!

HEAD OF GUIDANCE
DEPARTMENT

Dear Class of January, 1955:

Particularly pleasant memories are associated with you since I consider myself a member of your group. My first full term at Weequahic commenced when you appeared as sophomores. I can now hope that I too have passed my probationary period with you.

As you prepare to take the oath of fealty for your responsibilities in the world whether it involve further education, military service, or the holding of a position, accept my accolade as I dub you "The Grand Class of January, 1955."

Sincerely,

William A. Rubinfeld

coat of arms

In the beginning there arose from scattered quarters a multitude of young damsels and pages. It was here on the grounds of Lord Hawthorne that we first met and silently dedicated ourselves to uphold the traditions, ideals, and honour of the court. This was the commencement of a four-year adventure, an exciting challenge which would admirably be met, as the swordsman sets out to complete a daring mission with ultimate success. New friends, new experiences, new encounters; it was a season for the new and exciting. And it came to pass that we, the newest subjects in the sports arena that first year, were witnesses to a championship tourney of Equestrians. "Oh great joy! Splendid regality. Grand happiness," the palace walls resounded with shouts of triumph—and we too felt the joys of chivalry. 'Twill never be forgotten: the champions of the "Contests"—the journeys made to distant places of enchantment by the Society of Honours—nor the candlelight ball, which marked the finale of our days at Ackerman's fief.

Lo! And it soon came about that we graduated from the title of "underlings" and were received in our new domain by King Conovitz. It was here that we first joined our friends from the Estate of Madison. Together we would remain for three years. The strangeness which we encountered in the "grand palace" was accompanied by many helpful aids from the elders of the court. Free elevator passes, directions to the swimming pool, and maps of the many lavishly decorated corridors, were adequately dispersed to the bewildered members of our class. We learned many interesting facts in our second year. Some of us began to learn the language of a distant land, because we realized that in far-off days we might need this subject to maintain the friendship of other empires. Others were taught subjects of commerce, so that they could better deal with the trading of wares for our noble palace and our honoured lords.

Swiftly flew the day, and after the passing of darkest night, one more year had been measured by the sun and the moon. We had travelled midway through our journey, and were ready to assume the responsibilities accompanied with the title of "Lords" of the realm.

When the time came for us, as elders, to elect our heads of state, we chose Weinstock, Hantman, Haskin, and Moskowitz. And hark, the entire palace called upon Hamerman and Stone, two of our knights, to guide wisely the entire kingdom. We knew that we had begun to fulfill the pledge given at the commencement of our adventure. And during the night of the "Square Dance" held in the Court Yard, we knew that the weeks of preparation had been part of the challenge to be met. The place was vividly decorated and all of us donned our peasant skirts and work pants for a time of pretending. So the night passed—dancing, dancing, happily singing. And it would long be remembered.

Time was drawing nigh. Soon the days would come to plan for our future, to complete our stay at the court. In our last year, Cohen, Hantman, Haskin, and Schultz were chosen to reign over us.

In order to raise funds for our treasury and bursar Schultz, we presented the play "June Mad" in the open air theatre. The cast included Cohen, Hantman, Koerner, Pivnick, Sachs, Suchomel, and Levinson. What a grande success it was!!

The Hop was held in a lower hall of the castle on a beautiful night in June. Many days spent in preparation had created a few hours of blessed enchantment. Our hearts were gay, our voices happy, and we were filled with joy and delight.

As tradition has dictated for centuries when one reaches this far in his travels, the torch of responsibility is passed from those leaving to those who are to be the new guiding force of the kingdom. And so it was that as our spokesman, King Cohen accepted the torch in the name of a challenge which has sparked all kingdoms from time immemorial.

So now the hour has arrived to depart. Weinstock, restored as king, has led us well. Our Legend, the story of our lives, awaits us. The grande ball, held in the realm of Essex was indescribable. The music floated through the hall, as the clouds smoothly made their path in the sky. Elegance and beauty had been achieved. This was our farewell together.

And as we walked down the aisle, a silent tear found its mark on many an eye. We were remembering the past, and wondering of the future. But one thing was certain, the challenge had been met.

kobetz's kings ★ homeroom 212

As the 8:30 gong chimes, a sudden sound of hoofbeats and carriages may be heard, for both brave knights and fair damsels are rushing to enter Castle No. 212 before King Kobetz gives the order to raise and lock the drawbridge. Now it is almost impossible to enter unless you storm it. When quiet finally reigns, the King orders his personal scribe, Lady Gloria Golden to call the roll.

Sir Isaac Whitefield comes forward with his scroll from which he reads the activities which are to take place when the day's work is done and there is time for jesting.

Various forms are then distributed by the King to be filled out by every knight and lady. They must be answered carefully for they are to go to the high office.

That very brave knight who is also captain of our army tournament, Juke Pivnick, sits with his able-bodied men, Sirs Vincent DiBiasi, Jack Geller, and Leonard Pivnick. They are certainly discussing their plans for the next joust, which will be held on Saturday at Unterman Field.

Suddenly there comes a hammering at the outer gates. Sir "Becky" Beckerman, late as usual, is clamoring for admittance. The drawbridge is finally lowered by our gateman Sir John Schneider, after much debate.

Now that we are settled once again, our prima ballerina, Lady Sheila Fosman, entertains with a bit of ballet, while the castle wolves, Mel Glucksman, Marty Sachs and Stuart Jason nod their approval.

Fred Wiese and Paul Hagen entertain those in their immediate vicinity with reminiscence of their army reserve expedition. The ladies McGlynn recount the story of Lady Rochelle Stem and a knight from a neighboring court.

Sam "Moose" Weinstock and Bob Stone, returning this morning from their search for the Holy Grail, have been presented many honours. Sir Weinstock was made Commander-in-Chief of the 4A class and Sir Stone Assistant General of the O.B.A. Council. The beautiful Lady Marilyn Weiss begs these two brave gentlemen for the news of her departed swami.

The court chemists, Lady Carol Reimer and Sir Larry Lewin have their heads together concocting new formulae that will outdo those of the Borgias.

We have not yet heard today from our good-will Ambassadors Sir Joel Levinson, Sir Harold Blinder and Sir Ralph Singer as they are busy selling ads to the neighboring domains.

In a secluded corner stands our renowned artist, Lady Marian Hersh bain. She is painting a group picture of Lady Helene Kohn, Lady Paula Merzel, Sir Charles Cooperstein, Lady Elizabeth Metternick, Sir Wilbert Snyder, and Sir Sheridan Willner.

Before leaving for our respective duties of the day, King Kobetz calls for the forms that had previously been passed out. Sir Leonard Lippin leads the class in a rousing chorus of "On Top," the theme song of the brave knights of Castle No. 212.

o'connor's clan ★ homeroom 218

As we mount the steps of Westminster Abbey, once more our thoughts drift back to the days of yore. The tolling of the bell seems to transform the cathedral to Queen O'Connor's Castle where her subjects are assembling in her chamber. Prince Sheldon Bross greets the queen as she ascends the throne.

The Queen issues a royal welcome to the presence of Duchess Fran Augenblick from the outer kingdom. Betty Roth, private scribe, begins to assign the daily tasks and accounts for those present in her Majesty's chamber.

Striding gallantly forward, Knight Mike Suchomel seats himself among Sue Krug, Libby Schenerman, and Betty Woods, Ladies-in-Waiting to the Queen. Fashions of the court are smartly displayed by five fair damsels—Nancy Anderson, Sandy Cooper, Carol Richard, Sheila Kohn, and Barbara Kaplowitz.

Squires Charles Anderson, James Clemens, Larry Fincke, and Erwin Steinberg confer on matters of the day. Not far away are two of the Queen's favorite athletes, Bob Goodman, and Marty Koltenuk.

Heard echoing throughout the chamber are the gales of laughter of court jester, Marsha Rosenfeld. Representatives to Parliament the honorable Jerry Klass, Ivan Wyden, Professor of Etymology, and Alan Hamerman, another great athlete, weigh the proposed solutions to the problem of the budget. Members of the Honor Corps, Sandy Woolf, and Shirley Needle, have just received word that their attendance at a special meeting upon dismissal from the Queen's chamber is imperative.

Baroness Phyllis Stern compliments Doris Liedke and Dolores Spencer on their recent performance at the Candlelight Ball. Court stenographers Zelda Greenfarb, Sylvia Sherr, Louise Corin, and Anita Eisenberg record the proceedings of the day.

Damsels in distress Myra Lieberman and Carol Peason find the broken spoke in the wheel of their coach blameworthy for their tardiness. When assured of everyone's presence, Prince Sheldon takes his place beside the Queen. Thus another day commences in the O'Connor castle.

The tolling of the bell brings us once again to the realm of reality where yesterday fades and tomorrow begins.

eisen's equestrians ★ homeroom 303

It is morning in castle 303 ruled by Sir Irving Eisen. He glances about his realm and is dismayed to find that not one of his subjects has arrived and already, the hourglass on the wall reads 8:20. But suddenly, the peace of the early morning hours is shattered by the clang of iron shields and the thunderous stamp of prancing studs. Sir Eisen lowers the draw-bridge and admits the first of his subjects, Richard Dvorin, Marshall Levine and Sheldon Oppenheimer. Soon, more and more subjects trickle in and begin to busy themselves with the morning routine. Ina Glickfield and Marcia Uries are engaged in the ordeal of completing chem labs with the aid of Chuck Grossman and Mel Jannes. Above the scratching of pens, the two feminine chemists can be heard exclaiming over the newest shade in lipstick and nail polish, and the gallant knight in whose chariot they rode home the day before.

Suddenly, in dashes June Goldman who, after calling breathless greetings, busies herself with the stack of articles that eager reports of the monthly scripture, the Calumet have left for her.

In another corner of the room, William Siegel, Russell LaValla, Harvey Rein and John Reitberger are pouring over the scores of local tournaments listed in the newspaper. Don Barna and Louie Maier are in a huddle, discussing the tactics used in last Saturday's joust in Unterman Field. And at another table Stuart Gould and Steven Gold are reciting chemistry equations.

A sudden clatter of hoofbeats heard in the long corridor outside Sir Eisen's entrance announces the arrival of Larry Hantman and Bill Cohen who are soon surrounded by other knights and damsels of 303.

A blare of trumpets herald the entrance of more fair damsels, Barbara Wasserman, Phyllis Steiner, Barbara Willsky, Wyolene Flagg and Shirley Wasserman.

Close behind them are Marvin Hupart, Bob Silverman, and the only red-headed knight of Sir Eisen's realm, Norman Zeitlin.

The din and clamor cease momentarily at the sound of the final gong. Just as its last tone dies, Richard Feller and Harold Friedman approach the castle entrance. They are about to burst through the door, protesting that their white charger stalled, when they see the vision of Sir Eisen through the glass panelling, and something in his glance cautions them to report to the lower regions for a late slip.

Now Sir Eisen is ready to begin the morning's procedure. After the reading of the daily psalm, Warren Grover removes the flag from its stand and directs the salute. The class business of the day and the impending Legend deadlines are made known by Rita Kravet, Larry Shulman and Sonnie Gerkin, and the previous hub-bub of the morning is resumed until the first period gong is resounded. And as his subjects gather up their armor for the day, Sir Eisen watches them fondly: his loyal knights of the oblong tables.

schechter's swordsmen ★ homeroom 308

To be a Weequahic High School Senior is shining knighthood at its best, and we, the noblemen of Mrs. Hannah Litzky's Homeroom 211, from Applebaum to Yadman, prepared to take advantage of this loyal opportunity. The sorcerers must have enchanted this assemblage of thirty-two, for the escapades of Jay Rosen, the tardiness of Larry Moskowitz, and the loquacity of Larayne Rindzner somehow escaped the detection of our thane, Marvin Kravitz.

Our group was represented at the 3A Square Dance as Litzky's Lambs, and no title could possibly have been less appropriate. Certainly the action of us foundlings, encouraged by Sam Carfagno and Ira Skolnick, proved the absurdity of such a label.

Mrs. Esther Schechter became our omnipotent guardian in our 4B term, and the crusade from 211 to 304 proved beneficial for we had adequate equipment to aid in our endeavors. It was now possible for Buddy Orlans to copy Murray Polinsky's Physics Labs with a hillbilly background—a radio was included among our newly acquired possessions. Full use was made of the granite sink by the innumerable fleets which departed and harboured under the superb seamanship of Richard Olman and Paul Gluck. A stool shortage was immediately established despite the fact that Donny Gallanter used one for each book and two for his weary feet. However, when an extra stool was not accessible, Bernie Foss' desk served as the necessary hassock. The grille-covered radiator in the rear oftentimes warmed the . . . hearts of Roberta Koerner and Freddy Yadman. The development of athletic ability was a point of concentration and the oversized wastecan improved the jumpshots of Herbie Kirkland and the fielding prowess of Harold Lipton.

Sheilah Haskin and Jerry Schultz represented 304 on the roundtable discussions as the Scribe and the Guardian of the Exchequer, respectively, but Essy Lempkowitz's efforts to report their activities were in vain. Only the shields of Herb Berlin, Albert Beim, and Brenda Bachman gleamed during this morning protocol, because Gloria Capasso and Carol Salzlein, along with the majority of us, maintained a smooth and rapid stream of chatter.

Upon returning to school in September, 1954, to begin our 4A term, we underwent an orientation period, for in contribution to the confusion, 304 was reincarnated to 308. The titles of Joel Marshall and Isadora Schwartz were added to the roster, Joan Wasserman proudly displayed a white majorette uniform, and Arty Harke became the featured runner of the track team.

Adora Cohen and Bonnie Pollak were the first maidens to display Chariot Licenses and Stuart Brody consistently remained too engrossed in his labyrinth of Chem equations and Algebra formulas to be aware of these mundane occurrences.

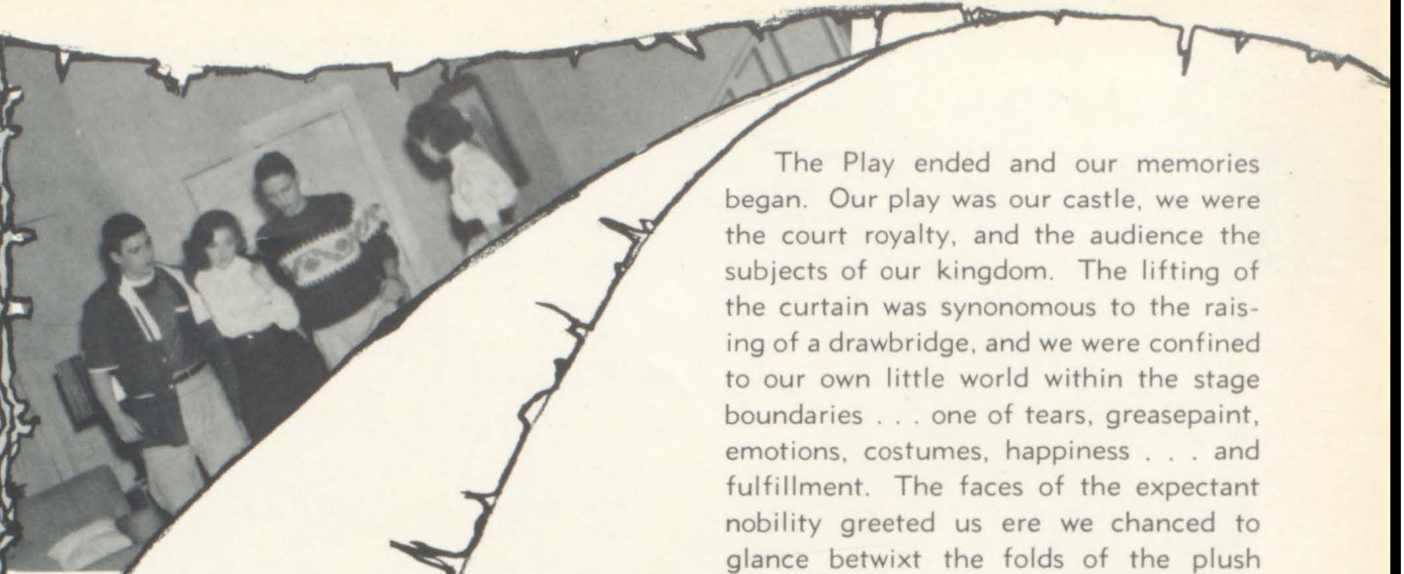

But the biography of us knights has not reached its conclusion, for we, the members of Homeroom 308, shall continue to make "history."

senior play

The Play ended and our memories began. Our play was our castle, we were the court royalty, and the audience the subjects of our kingdom. The lifting of the curtain was synonymous to the raising of a drawbridge, and we were confined to our own little world within the stage boundaries . . . one of tears, greasepaint, emotions, costumes, happiness . . . and fulfillment. The faces of the expectant nobility greeted us ere we chanced to glance betwixt the folds of the plush velvet tapestry. The entire balcony was charged with excitement as the draperies withdrew, harbouring a world of fancy and imagery. We offered to the populace two eves of jollity and jest, drama and drollery, culminating the months of labour and effort by Mr. Bucharest and crew in the production of "JUNE MAD."

All too quickly our presentation reached completion, and the enthusiastic applause of the crowds was abounding in our hearts. The fete was over, the glories gained; and the cherished memories of "JUNE MAD" emerged victoriously.

These were the things that the audience saw, these were the evident, apparent situations. But what of the infinitesimal conflicts that never progressed past the footlights? What of the real tears shed, of the uncontrollable fears, what of apprehension and anticipation? As invaluable to the success of a play as the talent of its performers and the quality of its text are these innumerable, intangible discords and difficulties.

No one disputed that in the final outcome the background sounds of singing and laughing were effective. "But how," asked Mr. David Blank, "are these noises contrived?" Shall we place backstage a group of the most vociferous individuals we can find, and have them display their talents at the designated moments? Certainly there was enough confusion behind the backdrops without added contributions! At last our Stage Crew Director emitted these gems — "We'll have to make a recording." And we did! For two weeks the cast of thirteen, understudies, electricians, and the artists combined efforts to produce an effect of sparkling conversation sprinkled with laughter, while Mr. Blank played with the tape recorder. The magic words were "hobble-gobble," continuously repeated until an indistinguishable collection of uproar and clamor was acquired, "But, Mr. Bucharest," we cried, "how many times can a man hobble-gobble?"

Ryerson and Clements wrote the play, but Mr. Bucharest chose the characters, thereby creating a demand for some radical reforms. The epitome of ridiculousness was Vida Eisenberg's taunting remark about Bobbie Koerner's light brown tresses. Vida, proud possessor of a platinum wave, subtly accused Bobbie of enlisting the powers of peroxide. After slight revision, Vida appeared as a brunette, and the two resumed their original positions.

Judy Miller and Judy Finkel were on diets, so that even had we succeeded in keeping the ice cream cones from melting on those hot, sticky April days, our efforts would have been in vain. Synthetic ice-cream cones,—that was the answer! But was it really? Discouraged cone committees, led by Marty Sachs, proved the seriousness of our plight, for the objects of our intended deception were inaccessible. So, Dairy Queen prospered, the Judys moaned, and our treasury suffered a deficit of fifteen cents daily.

Larry Hantman and Bill Cohen weren't worried about the slack in ticket sales until Joel Levinson began wailing about "empty theaters on opening nights." "But our morale must never falter," courageously muttered Jack Pivnick, so we reinforced Carol Lipis' padding, glanced trepidiciously at the slowly diminishing ticket stockpile, and valiantly carried on. Miraculously, on the last Thursday and Friday, those wonderful little blue cards began to vanish, and the dream that we might have an audience became a reality. At 7:45 stomach-aches and similar afflictions were eradicated as the sound of voices, unforgettable, unbelievable, human voices, transcended over the dressing rooms. They had come, the people had actually arrived, and every person in the cast felt an indescribable thrill as he perceived the full significance of their presence.

last will and testament

On this, our demise from these illustrious halls of learning, we, the famous Class of January, 1955, being all of sound minds and bodies, draw up this, our Last Will and Testament:

To MRS. BERNSTEIN: We leave our gratitude for the wonderful job she has done as our grade adviser—and a bottle of Roux Touch-up to cover those gray hairs we might have caused.

To MR. GROSS: We extend our heartfelt thanks for his patience and many hours of hard work with the members of the Legend.

To THE COMING 4A's: We generously bequeath all that we have left behind, including some of our kind classmates, who will help them to become better acquainted with the responsibilities and duties of dignified Senior A's.

To THE JUNIORS: We leave the most musical of instruments, "The Liberty Bell," to those who watch anxiously for the termination of a period.

To THE SOPHOMORES: You've heard the saying "No more teachers, no more books." Well, we leave them both.

To THE FRESHMEN: We leave all discarded perambulators so that they may come to school in safety.

To THE ENTIRE STUDENT BODY: We leave the savory and appetizing odors that emanate from our beloved second-floor cafeteria.

To MISS O'CONNOR: We leave a year's supply of catnip for "Serenity."

To MRS. SCHECHTER: We leave a public address system so she can rest her weary voice with all future 4A homerooms.

To MR. EISEN: We leave a radar device to detect all latecomers to homeroom.

To MR. KOBETZ: We leave a crew of pretty girls to assist in the business office.

To MR. "C" and the CHEM LAB: We generously leave a five gallon bottle of "Eau de Toilette."

To MR. EISENBERG and the O.B.A. COUNCIL: We grant the privilege of installing Coca-Cola in the water fountains.

To COACH STAMELMAN: We leave the spirit of our graduating players to aid in years to come.

To THE GOSSIPERS: We gladly leave a vacuum cleaner to pick up all the dirt.

To WEEQUAHIC HIGH SCHOOL: We leave our undying loyalty to "Our Wigwam on the Hill."

We hereby appoint Mr. Michael Conovitz to be the sole executor of this, our last will and testament. Our sincerest thanks and appreciation for his guiding hand throughout our school years. We sigh as we, in witness thereof, set our hand and seal this 26th day of January, in the year of our Lord A.D., Nineteen Hundred and Fifty-five.

(Signed)

Herbie Kirkland is our only graduating basketball player, and an exceptional one at that. As a freshman, he captained the freshman team to a 11-2 record. He also was the leading scorer, with Marv Kravitz and Hal Lipton helping him. In his sophomore year he won his "W" on the varsity team. Though inexperienced, he was on the starting team for the last half of the season. Herbie really came into his own in his junior year. His best game was against the mighty Montclair team, when he scored 25 points. He also scored 21, 21, and 22 against St. Benedicts, Barringer, and Perth Amboy, respectively. He ended the season as the team's leading scorer with a 15-point average. However, his greatest heights in Weequahic basketball competition should be reached in his senior year. He will co-captain the team with Alvin Attles.

...of football fame

Al Hamerman

Al, our big strong boy, played two seasons for Weequahic. He was our punter for the 1953 and 1954 seasons, and averaged forty yards per punt. When he wasn't punting, Al played a good offensive and defensive game at tackle.

Bill Cohen

A veteran of two years, Bill is one of the best guards ever produced by Weequahic. In the South Side game of 1953, he had the rare privilege of a guard, by scoring a touchdown on an intercepted pass. In 1954, Bill again was a standout lineman.

Jack Pivnick

Jack has played three seasons of varsity ball. In 1953, Jack was our leading center and gained recognition on the All-City team. He was captain of the 1954 team, and along with his great offensive work, he proved to be a good defensive end. Jack has been rated as the best center in Weequahic football history.

Lou Maier

Lou played two years of varsity ball. He was mainly a defensive player, and one of the best. In 1953, he was our leading line-backer and occasionally played halfback. He was hampered by injuries early in the 1954 season, but recovered and played a brilliant defensive game.

Jack Geller

Jack (Big Mamoo) Geller is one of the hard luck boys on our football squad. In 1953, Jack was our best tackle for the first two games, but then he received a broken ankle and was sidelined for the rest of the season. Again in 1954 Jack was out for the first part of the season because of injuries. But when he returned, he brightened the team's future.

Herbie Kirkland

Herbie, a fleet-footed halfback, played two seasons for Weequahic. He played an important part in the winning of the 1953 Thanksgiving Day game, by getting two touchdowns. In the first game of the 1954 season against Linden, he raced fifty-five yards for a touchdown. He also is a standout defensive player.

Don Barna

This fleet-footed back is considered the fastest one ever to play for Weequahic. In the 1953 season, Don's blazing speed led the way for many Weequahic touchdowns. In 1954, Don was lost to the team because of ineligibility.

Ike Whitefield

"Izzy", as he is called, played varsity ball for three years. In 1953 he sparked the South Side victory by setting up one touchdown and scoring another. Hampered by injuries most of the season, Izzy returned in good condition to help win the Hillside game. In 1954, he switched from right halfback to fullback to fit the needs of the team.

Sam Carfagno

Sam played junior varsity ball in 1953, but rose to be starting fullback in the 1954 season. Along with his fine offensive ability, Sam was also a good defensive line-backer.

Len Pivnick

Lenny is known as the team's utility man. Both in the 1953 and 1954 seasons, Lenny was used in almost every defensive line position. He also was the second string center for the past two seasons.

Marty Koltenuk

cross country

The only graduating harrier of the 1954 campaign will be the captain, Artie Harke. He is a veteran of three standout seasons.

The Indians did as well as expected throughout the 1954 campaign with a young team consisting mainly of freshmen and sophomores.

track

The 1955 track team will lose the added support of four outstanding runners.

Standouts of running were Artie Harke, quarter mile; Herb Kirkland, half mile; Marty Koltenuk and Don Barna in the sprints. Starring in field events were Harke and Barna, both of whom excelled in broad-jumping.

The Weequahic High Relay Team aided by front-runner Koltenuk and anchorman Harke won medals in the 1954 City Meet along with half-miler Herb Kirkland.

...of baseball's best

Robert Silverman

Bob was one of the stalwarts of the Weequahic nine pitching staff. His first two years in the school were spent gaining valuable knowledge and experience on the Junior Varsity squad. The 1954 campaign was his first on the Varsity but he gained the rare distinction of being one of the pitchers in a no-hit no-run game during the season.

Ivan Wyden

Since there are no athletics in Madison Junior High School where Ivan spent his Freshman year, his first sports participation in Weequahic came as a Sophomore when he played Junior Varsity baseball. As a Junior, Ivan won his first varsity letter, and during the 1954 campaign he was an important cog in the Weequahic scheme because of his ability to handle his position.

Harold Lipton

Hal played Junior Varsity baseball in his Freshman and Sophomore years where he gained valuable knowledge and experience as an infielder. In the following seasons on the Varsity, Hal performed brilliantly and in his Senior year was selected as a second baseman on the second All-City and All-County teams.

Marvin Kravitz

Who is the school's outstanding baseball player this year? On the basis of play through the 1954 campaign, one athlete who was in the running for this distinction was Marvin Kravitz, one of the finest outfielders ever to come out of the school. Fast as a jet and gifted with amazing hands, Marv was able to make many a sparkling play on the defense, and his hitting provided the offense needed to win games.

Marshall Levine

In his Sophomore year Marshall became a member of the Baseball team. For the next two seasons Marshall played Junior Varsity ball where his rise to stardom was short of mediocre. In his Senior Year he became a member of the Varsity and during the season proved himself a constant and dependable pitcher.

Louis Maier

Lou played Junior Varsity Baseball for the Sophomore and Junior years. He became known for his long ball hitting, and when he made the varsity team, his bat really proved to be useful. Also his versatility, in playing all three outfield positions was a great help to the Weequahic nine.

golf

Bob Stone
Height 5' 8"—Weight 150

After a seven year lapse, in 1953, a golf team was reorganized in Weequahic. The reasons for this recurrence of interest were the golfing abilities of Bob Stone and Jerry Schultz. Under the leadership of coach Matthew Brady, they helped form a gold club from which the team was drawn. Stone, captain and the first man on the team, and Schultz, the very able number two man, played some highly interesting matches with schools like Nutley, Thomas Jefferson and Rahway.

Jerry Schultz
Height 6' 1"—Weight 160

bowling

Mel Glucksman

Mel Glucksman bowled for Weequahic during the 1953-54 season. That was the season in which the team broke and set several records, in which Mel played an important part. Mel was the sparkplug of the team, always coming through in the clutch, when the team needed him the most.

Bob Goodman
Height 5' 11"—Weight 150

Bob Goodman

Bob Goodman, during his sophomore year, led the team with the highest average and rolled the highest scoring game of the season. During his second season, he performed one of the most astounding feats ever in City League competition, by bowling a score of 200 or better for five consecutive weeks. He wound up this season with the highest average in the city, a fact he can well be proud of.
